The state as exists in paper. In the federal jurisdiction report it talked about servicing paid to the lawful state for providing services to the military areas.
Like schools for dependents.

The veterans hospitals were on federal lands. The doctors were officers. The military has officers that are doctors. Modern times they have pilots that flew f-18s that were also flight surgeons. Officers on vet lands were doctors required to be resident. They lived in the lands. In Leavenworth Kansas they still have the houses there, pretty neat to see. The doctors wife and children would live on the federal lands also but they had no essential services such as schools for the dependent children.

They contracted with the states to provide for those services but over the years they have basically bribed the states with federal money to essentially do whatever the feds wanted. I think recently they tried to bribe a state over the covid crap. They are doing it with hospitals and counting deaths as covid that aren't.

That is the legal state I believe, the state of congress that bribes the original state- however both have become the same. There is no dual system only the one created by congress. The actual people are not represented.

That is how I see the legal state.
I am thinking it's the non-positive laws having to do with contracts rather than the actual constitutional government strictly for the military posts/federal lands.
